The new case follows the Chinese coronavirus outbreak, which has already infected more than 2,700 people across the world and killed more than 130 people. A Canadian woman with no recent travel history to China is now recovering in the intensive care unit at Vancouver's British Columbia Hospital after becoming sick on a trip to Iran, where she was visiting relatives. The patient and the BC Centre for Disease Control's Dr. Janice Carruthers announced the news at a news conference Wednesday, noting the woman's condition is now improving and she's been weaned off of oxygen and on to nasal cannula. "The infection is mild in this particular person," Carruthers said. "I stress that though this case is mild, as we speak there are many other cases that are mild and they can pass their infection on," Carruthers said. The first case of the coronavirus in Canada is the first confirmed case in North America. (CBC) The BC Centre for Disease Control said she tested positive for the virus after presenting to the hospital with a fever and a shortness of breath. She is currently under public health supervision in her home, and upon diagnosis the patient and her family were put into contact with public health authorities for monitoring for 14 days. Four people who had been in close contact with the patient in the last two weeks have been isolated to monitor for signs of infection. That includes the patient's husband, mother and brother. All of the patient's family members will remain under quarantine for 14 days after they leave her home, the BC Centre for Disease Control said 6d1f23a050
